COMMUNICATION

While serving in the Army I achieved the rank of sergeant. One of the main responsibilities for that rank it is to have communications skills. Such as to communicate to leadership above and translate what needs to be done to the people below me. Also, by providing mentorship and purpose for the task at hand.

LEADERSHIP

While serving in the Army as a sergeant I've had the pleasure to complete multiple tasks such as:

Increasing individual team's physical fitness throughout rigorous physical training sessions both on and off duty.

Coordinating and managing marksmanship for 12 soldiers, which resulted in 100% qualification with four earning the highest score possible.

Encouraged and developed soldiers within the squad, that lead to two of my soldiers being promoted to the position on team leader.

Enabled all soldiers to confide in with personal and professional concerns; allowed for a clear and positive work environment.

While in college was nominated to the National Society of Leadership and Success (NSLS)
